PREFACE.

Of the thousands who daily consult the City Directory, there are very few, if any at all, who give themselves the trouble to reflect on the amount of organized labor that must necessarily be bestowed upon it, or who have any idea of the number of years this important work has been issued. We have, in a previous volume, given some of the particulars in respect to the process, by which so large an amount of work is accomplished with a degree of accuracy which must excite the wonder of thinking men who have had any experience in similar undertakings; and we will now, for the benefit of those who take an interest in local antiquarian lore, give a list of the publishers of the Directory since its commencement. The name of Longworth was, for many years, associated with the Directory, and many persons have thought that he was the originator of the work. The present volume, the largest and most comprehensive that has yet been issued, is the seventy-fourth issue of the work.

The first Directory of the City of New York was published in the year 1786, by David Franks, who also published the second volume in the succeeding year. There was an interval of one year in which the Directory did not appear, but its publication was resumed in 1789, by Hodge, Allen & Campbell, who continued to publish it until 1792, when they were succeeded by William Duncan, who published it until 1795. The well-known publisher, David Longworth, who deserves remembrance from his being the first publisher of the writings of Washington Irving, took hold of the Directory in 1796, and continued to publish it regularly until 1817, when he was succeeded by Thomas Longworth, who continued it from the year 1818 up to 1842, when the work passed into the hands of John Doggett, Jr., who continued to issue it until his death in 1851. Since then it has been regularly issued by its present compiler and publisher. The gradual increase in the size of the Directory as distinctly marks the progressive growth of the metropolis of the New World, as the rings in the trunk of an oak mark the age of the tree. The first New York Directory contained but 821 names, while the volume for the year 1859–60 contained 147,325. The present volume affords, in the increase of the names it contains, as well as in the greater amount of more compact information, a most gratifying indication of the continued growth and prosperity of this city, which is, in itself, but an index to the growth and prosperity of the whole country.

There is one fact, which may be mentioned in connection with the evidences of the city's growth, that is more significant than the increase of the number of names; and that is, the greater extent of the canvassers' labors in obtaining them. Up to 1859, it had not been found necessary to extend the routes of canvassers above Fifty-second Street; but the present year, so rapid has been the upward extension of population, that it has been found necessary to canvass the whole city; and the Directory for the years 1860–61 will contain, for the first time, the names of every housekeeper from the Battery to the Harlem River.

It is not to be expected that a work like this, which makes it necessary for the agents employed in collecting the information it contains to knock at every door in the city, should be completed without many vexatious hindrances, caused by the ill-tempered, the inconsiderate, and the ill-intentioned people, who are quite as numerous in New York as in other places; but the compiler and publisher have reason to be grateful for the general disposition evinced by their fellow-citizens, to afford all the necessary facilities for obtaining the information required. One of the very serious obstacles to the accomplishment of their work, has been the knavish impositions of bogus canvassers, who have gone about every year in great numbers, collecting names and taking money from unsuspecting people, on the pretence of giving them a prominent insertion in their pretended Directory. The public have suffered more seriously from these persevering swindlers than we have, and to put our citizens on their guard, and to protect them from the wiles of these chevaliers d' industrie, we would caution everybody to refuse to have any thing to do with any one representing himself as a canvasser, or agent of the Directory, who cannot show his certificate, authorizing him to act for it, signed by H. Wilson.

Great confusion has been caused, in many instances, by a lack of some systematic plan in the naming and numbering of our streets, and by the unwarranted changes which are frequently made by property owners, in the designation of the "Places" and "Squares" in which they reside. No small inconvenience has been occasioned the present year, by the action of the Street Commissioner, in renumbering some of the streets after our canvass of the names had been completed. In other cases, where the canvassers had been directed to follow the order of numbering which would take place, orders were given to the occupants of houses, not to make any change in their numbers "until further notice." No amount of care and attention can obviate the errors, which must necessarily result from this action on the part of city officials. In another instance, the designation of a part of a street has been changed to that of a square, but no corresponding alteration having been made in the numbering of the houses, we have been compelled to adhere to the old name and numbers, instead of conforming to the ordinance, as we invariably have done when it has been possible. There will be found a few apparent errors resulting from these causes, but they are very few indeed, and we hope will not seriously incommode the public.

There should be some uniform and simple plan adopted by the city authorities in dividing the transverse streets into East and West, by making Broadway and Fifth Avenue the dividing line, by which the locality of a house might be known from its number and designation.

One of the most reprehensible practices of our city government has been that of changing the names of streets, to satisfy the fantastical whims of property holders, who hope by such means to impart greater value to their property. It is inevitable that the character of certain localities should change with the changing nature of their inhabitants, but that is no apology for changing the names of streets. What possible good, for example, is to be accomplished by changing the name of Orange Street to Baxter Street, or Anthony Street to Worth Street? Those old names have an archæological value, and they should be preserved as landmarks, for the benefit of posterity.

The necessity of excluding all extraneous matter from the Directory, to prevent an increase of its size, and also, of necessity, its price, has rendered the adoption of very strict rules in relation to the admission of names which do not properly belong to it. There are many business firms in New York, who act as agents of manufacturing establishments in Europe and in other parts of the Union, who have been solicitous to have not only their own names inserted, but also the names of the firms for whom they sell goods. But, in all such cases, in justice to the public, we have made it a practice, the reasonableness of which every one must acknowledge, to charge for the insertion of the out-of-town or foreign names. That no one may imagine that any partiality has been shown in giving greater prominence to some names than others, it must be understood, that in all cases where there is any distinction of the kind made, or a trade mark or card inserted, a price has been paid for it.

The canvass was commenced on the 2d of May, and completed on the 2d of June—twenty-seven working days having been consumed in the collection and preparation for the press, of the 150,303 names (being 2,978 more than were contained in the Directory for 1859–60) in the volume now offered to the public.
